Other Info:

As with many distilleries Royal Lochnagar's routes lie with the Illegal distilling that took place up until the early 1800's. James Robertson a local man began distilling legally around the area of Lochnagar in 1826, this was aptly named Lochnagar Distillery, situated on the North side of the Dee. It was believed that competitors were responsible for the fire that burnt the distillery to the ground in 1841. This distillery was re-built and he continued distilling in this area until 1860.
