Description: On the nose you are met with delicate floral notes followed by subtle salted caramel from the sea air influence on the casks. The palate carried through the floral notes from the nose and introduce fresh maltiness with a slight sweet biscuit taste, the classic highland park salinity is ever present yet not over-baring throughout the palate into the long complex finish.

Other Info: Cask No.33 distilled in February 1994 and bottled in February 2015. Bottled at cask strength, unchill-filtered and no added colouring. Hailing from Scotland's most northerly distillery, Highland Park is located on the Orkney isles. Highland Park is one of the few distilleries left to malt their barley in house ensuring their highest standards go into making the spirit. Being in such proximity to the coast, the maturing whisky develops a well-integrated sea air influence adding to the complexity and sense of place to the resulting spirit.
