Nestling by the bonnie banks of Loch Lomond our family-owned Scotch whisky distillery takes its name and its exquisitely pure water from this most picturesque and celebrated of all Scotland's lochs. The beauty and tranquility of the setting belies the considerable activity within one of the finest Scotch Whisky Distilleries.

Uniquely designed stills enable us to produce a total of eight different single malt Scotch Whiskies. In addition, our new "state of the art" grain stills, the most modern in the land, arguably produce the very best single grain whisky in Scotland.

At Loch Lomond dedicated experts have been nurturing distinctive drams for generations. The ever-mindful attention of our managers ensures that only the choicest ingredients are selected, then allowed to mature undisturbed within the finest oak barrels, crafted within the distillery by our very own coopers.

It is currently the only distillery in Scotland that produces both grain and malt whisky on the same site. The average annual production is 10 million litres of grain alcohol and 2.5 million litres of malt alcohol, the equivalent of 43 million standard bottles of whisky every year.

Most Scotch malt whisky distilleries, because of the design of the stills, produce only one type of spirit. Our distillery employs four unusual stills with rectifying heads and two conventional pot stills with traditional 'swan necks'. This range of stills allows us to produce a total of eight different single highland malt whiskies.
