The Knees has been critically acclaimed since its launch in 2017 with great reviews from wine critics such as Olly Smith in the Mail on Sunday "Easily my favourite non-alcoholic bubbly on the market and a bargain too. Superb!"

Or Jane MacQuitty in The Times who wrote "Has surprising green tea and sweet, peachy stone-fruit pizzazz, plus an almost viognier-like finish"

Other Info:

The Bees Knees is a sophisticated alternative to traditional sparkling wine - it looks and tastes like a typical fizz that is served at parties, baby showers and enjoyed as an aperitif. The non-alcohol-drinking guest, flute in hand, blends in seamlessly with the rest of the party. And when their glass is topped up, it's from a stylish bottle worthy of Prosecco or Cava.

Made from grape and infused with green tea, The Bees Knees offers a lovely hint of white flower aroma on the nose and is zingy and refreshing on the palate thanks to its well balanced acidity. It looks and tastes like a sparkling wine, but has no alcohol, low sugar, no gluten and around half the calories of the average fizz - what's not to like? It is also Vegetarian and Vegan friendly and has just 36 calories per 125ml glass.
